My sweet little Bird.

Your very breezy letter of Sunday night, was very welcome containing as it did so many things I wanted to know. I am glad you & Lessie went to your own Church. (Did you hear anything about the jubilee supper which is to follow the opening.
I left the appointing of the committees in Mr. Fallon's hands. I suppose now it is pretty sure that unless some bad news reaches me from home, that I shall stay over next Sunday, maybe I may shall have such a chance again, but remember if the least thing occurs which makes my presence needed at home, only say so, & I shall be there as fast as the first train will bring me. Send me the hymn in your next,

I want to see it. I learn from it what thoughts are filling my (Dickens) ^{mind} bread during my absence.
I am very sympathetic for small time every day, I should feel dreadfully if no letter came. Papa's was not heard from today.
Tell him I only answer the letters I receive, & that almost keeps me up nights.
Give my love to Grandma, & remember me very kindly to Annie. Much love to you ^{myself} from your devoted Mamma.

My dear Grace.

I was made quite uneasy yesterday by not receiving your customary letter. Lessee's came but he did not mention you so I trust nothing is the matter. I suppose either you forgot to mail your letter until it was too late for the mail, or someone came & you were prevented from writing. Our weather is glorious again, a perfect Sunday, today, yesterday, we drove to Lloyd and were almost frozen coming home.
